THE JOYS OF SPRINGTIME in Carmel Valley delight the eye and lift the spirit at every bend of the road. An exuberant Connie Hood puts aside college studies to romp with frisky dogs near the Carmel River, while all around her are the bright blooms heralding Sunday's good news—spring has officially arrived. (And the less said about yesterday's drizzly, blustery weather, the better.)

TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir:

Why is it that no matter what anyone wants to build or do in the Valley, immediately someone voices disapproval.

What an awful sight a long wooden irregular fence blocking the view of the river, would be.

I for one think the new fence along the section of the Valley road is fine.

Instead of constantly fighting everything, why can't we get together and try to help each other.

If we, the people of the Valley cannot get along in our own small area, how can we ever expect "PEACE ON EARTH" among NATIONS.

Sincerely,
VERA STOKES

To the Editor:

Once again, please accept the grateful appreciation of the Monterey County Chapter of the National Foundation - March of Dimes for the wonderful support and coverage given to our 1970 campaign.

The job for the volunteers involved in the March of Dimes campaign is made easier when the public is informed as to the important contribution they are making against birth defects through their donation.

Please give all the staff of the Carmel Valley Outlook our special thanks for the help they are always so willing to give to us.

Executive Director
March of Dimes

Dear Editor & Reader,

There are many beautiful people in our world & even though we are so long overdue with this Christmas thank you we want everyone to know of some wonderful caring of less fortunate people.

We have had our "Christmas family" for three years & every year we've been blessed. This year was the best, and many of these people are also contributing to our fund for a bike, so you can see it didn't end with Christmas.

Gerry Clark, Helen Acker, Maney Sackman, Doug Berdet, Chris Bingham & her dear mother, Ruth Pryer, Mrs. L. Wolf, Gladys McLeod & her dress shop staff, Mrs. W. Mason & her kids at Middle School, Mrs. Lowery from Pebble Beach, Mrs. Dirickson from Pebble Beach, Mrs. Margaret White from Carmel, Mrs. Grace Fontes from Carmel, Miss Ann Leonard from Carmel, YMCA donated a 5 ft. tree, Chris Bingham donated a big turkey.

From all of us - God Bless You.

Marcucci explains Planners decision on Village apartments

Richard Dix's design for his three-story apartment buildings in Carmel Valley Village will not be challenged after all. The Village Committee, which planned to protest the Planning Commission's approval before the Board of Supervisors, was informed last week that no appeal is permitted on a design approval decision.

Meanwhile, Dr. Edward Marcucci, chairman of the Planning Commission, said the commissioners took the following points into consideration in granting the design approval:

Under the R-4-D-B-3 zoning in effect on the one-third of an acre parcel, the maximum allowable building height is 45 feet. Dix's apartments are 32 feet. On other specifications -- maximum land coverage allowed, 60 percent; Dix's buildings will cover 36.3 percent; rear yard setback required, 15 feet; Dix's proposal, 25 feet; front yard setback required, 30 feet; Dix's proposal, 30 to 32 feet; Side yard setback required, 10 feet; Dix's proposal, 10 feet; parking spaces required, 15; Dix's proposal, 20 parking spaces, with 15 covered.

"The sewage disposal propensities are determined by the Health Department," Marcucci continued, "and are deemed to be accurate by the Planning Commission.

"The access, landscaping, land use and other items may be of concern to the Planning Commission; however they could not legally be considered by them.

"Based on the plan, and a model requested by the Planning Commissioners, the commission felt the architectural appearances would be compatible with the area. The elevations presented for publication on a flat plane do an injustice to the complete plan in perspective and on different levels of slope.

"The builder did make a change at the commission's request to provide a shake roof overhang of 2½ feet.

"The mission of the Advisory Board," Marcucci concluded, "is to make recommendations to the Planning Commission. It is unfortunate that the Advisory Board chose to publicly debate an issue that is ethically a matter between the board and the Planning Commission. Internecine strife is never productive.

"The above is in no way to be construed as censure, but as a matter of information."

THE TOWN CRIER

A stunning bathtub in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stewart of La Rancheria is shown in a full-page color picture in the March 29 issue of Time. Actually, "bathtub" is a misnomer when applied to the spiraling bathing pool fashioned from polished rocks collected from Big Creek. Stone, Post and Flower designed the unusual bathing room for the Stewarts two years ago to give the general feeling of a tide pool. Not shown in the Time photograph is a redwood table in another part of the room, where Mrs. Stewart sorts and polishes her extensive collection of shells.

Dru Dunn is moving her colorful Keeping Room to Carmel after Easter. She plans to open May 1 in the Forge in the Forest, a Carmel landmark at the corner of Junipero and 5th St.

The new "Forge in the Forest Keeping Room" will feature gourmet luncheons, served inside or out, and Dru's unique catering service. She doesn't plan to change the building's mellowed exterior in the slightest, but will enclose the corner with an antique grapestake fence "like the one that's partly falling down there now."

The Forge in the Forest was founded in the 1940's by former Carmel mayor John Catlin. It was later operated by Francis Whittaker, who closed it five years ago when he moved to Aspen, Colo.

Dru, still virtually immobolized by a cast on one leg, hopes to have her present Keeping Room on Pilot Road open on weekends for another month.

Carmel Valley is represented in the Peninsula Service Club Bowling League by a team from both the Carmel Valley Lions Club and the Kiwanis Club of Carmel Valley. In the four series they have bowled against each other, the more experienced Kiwanis team has a considerable lead, and is still in contention for first place in the league. The Kiwanis team members are: Joe Ricupero, capt., Bob Wehe, Orville Rogers, Bud Chapel, Lou Gardner, and Otto Huebner. The Lions team members are Don Holland, capt., Tom Bordonaro, Nick Skalyo, Bill Penpraze, Herman Tedrow and Lloyd Todd.

The Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services will hold a general membership meeting on Friday, April 2, at 10 a.m. at the USO in Monterey. Among the new members to be welcomed is Mrs. Harry (Rascha) Gillett of Carmel Valley. Members are asked to bring Betty Crocker coupons to contribute to a county-wide drive to purchase a kidney machine.

George Lockwood of Carmel Valley is heading fund-raising efforts for Camp Amigos, which will open its fourth day camp program on the grounds of All Saints' Day School in mid-July.

This year Camp Amigos is seeking more than $5000 in contributions from churches, civic organizations and individuals to enable it to expand to a five-week program. As in the past, the day camp will be open to children 7½ (second grade) to 11, with an overnight camp at Big Sur planned for 10 and 11-year olds.

If sufficient funds are received, the Camp Amigos committee will consider offering a second week of overnight camping, possibly in Yosemite, for children who have attended the Big Sur campout in previous years. No decision will be made on this until later this spring.

Camp Amigos applications will be available after Easter.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS TONIGHT

The board of trustees of the Carmel Unified School District will hold its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Brey Hall at Carmel High School.

Among action items on the agenda are proposed changes in the high school English program, adoption of board rules regarding campus disorders and a study concerning student transportation.

There will also be a discussion of recommendations for the 1971 summer school program and a review of the preliminary budget for 1971-72.

Schedule of Carmel Valley hearings

Odello Ranch development -- Planning Commission hearing on application for ST (special treatment) zoning scheduled next Wednesday, March 31, 7:30 p.m.

Arbor Development Co. project on Val Verde Drive -- Planning Commission hearing on application for use permit to build 45-unit "Casas de Carmel" scheduled next Wednesday, March 31, 8 p.m.

Cal-Am well and filter plant on Schulte Road -- Hearing before Board of Supervisors on appeal from Planning Commission decision granting use permit continued to next Tuesday, March 30, 2 p.m.

Hacienda Carmel rezoning -- Request for ST (special treatment) zoning will be heard by the Planning Commission next Wednesday, March 31, 2:55 p.m.

Carmel Valley Little League -- Request for use permit to build a new field adjoining the present Little League ballpark will be heard by the Planning Commission next Wednesday, March 31, 3:30 p.m.

Featherbow Ranch development -- Board of Supervisors to hear appeal by the Featherbow Corp. from decision of Planning Commission denying rezoning and tentative subdivision proposal on April 6, 10:30 a.m.

Hillside Zoning Ordinance -- Board of Supervisors hearing on report submitted by county-wide committee studying hillside conservation districts set for April 6, 2 p.m.

Carmel Valley Airport -- Board of Supervisors expected to set hearing for May 11, 2 p.m., on appeal of the Committee for Peace and Quiet from decision of the Planning Commission approving non-conforming use status and granting use permits to Al Hood for temporary office and radio with antenna.

Residents tell the Corps of Engineers...

"Dam the floods but don't cement the Valley"

BY PAT GRIFFITH

Many questions were raised and none answered as the Army Corps of Engineers held its first public hearing Friday night to launch a new survey of water resources development and flood control on the Carmel River.

"We don't have a project. We've come in to see what kind of project you want," Col. Charles R. Roberts, district engineer from San Francisco, told a crowd of almost 200 persons at Tularcitos School.

As witness after witness stepped forward to discuss past problems caused by flooding, one plea became a recurrent theme -- "we don't want a cement channel down the middle of Carmel Valley."

Roberts acknowledged this concern when he concluded the meeting with this assurance: "We realize very strongly we can come up with the most outstanding engineering solution, and it is no solution at all if it is not politically acceptable."

He urged the County Board of Supervisors to form a committee to work closely with the Corps to determine what project, if any, is needed and wanted to control flooding in the Valley.

Possible solutions, he said, could be a multipurpose dam, improved drainage facilities or various types of channel improvements.

"And we recognize, of course, that one perfectly valid option is to do nothing," he said.

The possibility of a major new dam that would combine the purposes of flood control, water supply and recreation was not given any encouragement by David Fiscus, Monterey division manager for the California-American Water Company.

Fiscus testified only briefly, saying that the water company is planning to build a new water supply dam within five years. Although he had no specific information to give the Corps of Engineers, he promised to cooperate with their study.

Following the meeting, I.H. Steinberg, chief of the Corps' water resources planning branch, said he thinks it would be a shame for the water company to proceed on its own with plans for a dam.

"I have been with the Corps for 37 years," he said, "and from our experience in that time I can say we have never been able to justify construction of a single-purpose flood control dam. I don't think this case will be any different."

He said that if the water company proceeds as planned with its own dam, this could limit the possibilities open to the Corps of Engineers in trying to control flooding.

He noted that the Corps of Engineers could have a project underway in seven years, while the water company has said it needs its dam five years from now.

"Is it worth it to go ahead like that for a difference of only two years?" he asked.

Supervisor Willard Branson, recovering from the flu, opened the hearing with a run-down on the history of flood control surveys for this area. On at least three previous occasions, he said, surveys indicated that a majority of Carmel Valley residents were opposed to any sort of flood control effort, so projects were never proposed.

Carmel mayor Barney Laiolo and city councilman Eben Whittlesey both emphasized the concern of Carmel for flood damage in the lower Valley, particularly as it could affect Mission Fields or the proposed Odello development.

"It is important to realize that people living in the Valley ... may be creating hazards for others living near them," Laiolo said.

Whittlesey said that "we all feel the Carmel River is beautiful and an important central feature of Carmel Valley. People who have watched the Corps in other places have a natural tendency to be concerned about (the Corps) wanting to build a concrete channel down the center of the Valley. I would hope that there can be an objective balance between flood control and the recreational aspects of the Carmel River."

Richard G. Baumhoff, secretary of the Hacienda Carmel Community Association, and Ivan Crase, president of the Hacienda's board of directors, stated that their bridge had repeatedly been threatened by trees and other debris coming downstream during periods of heavy rainfall.

Crase said that while "nothing should be done to make a channel," the Hacienda would like to see better flood protection, control of debris and an adequate water supply assured by a new dam.

Speaking for the Ventana chapter of the Sierra Club, Vern Yadon said his group is "realistic enough to know that some protection is necessary," but would prefer a flood control dam and flood plain zoning to a concrete channel.

The most dramatic account of what happens when the river rises was given by Frank Lucido, whose home at 918 W. Carmel Valley Road is close to the river.

Lucido had the audience laughing as he recounted his battles with the river. He suggested that the county provide bulldozers to keep the channel clear, and tax persons living along the river for this special service.

Gregory Sherman told the audience he had come to Carmel Valley in 1947 "and was lucky enough to see the river when it was really natural.

"If we put a channel in the river we'll lose everything," he said. "We're all worried about our property and investments. Maybe we should think more about the land ... I think maybe we should start thinking how to take care of our garden -- Carmel Valley is our garden -- and look to something besides cement, asphalt, greed.

"The land is starting to fight back and make it undesireable for us to be here. Or maybe we're making it undesireable for ourselves.

"I don't want to see any trenches like in Los Angeles, or any dams like on the Feather River," he commented. "Maybe we can restore things, instead of controlling ..."

Donald Scanlon of Carmel said he thinks it is important to consider the river "as an organic thing, to consider how to get along with floods to a certain degree." He urged formation of a flood control district, with a considerable percentage of land in the flood plain reserved for agricultural use only.

Supervisor Loren Smith attended the full hearing. Among others who testified and promised full support with the Corps study were: Leland R. Illinworth of the State Department of Water Resources in Fresno; Carl Hooper of George Bestor & Associates; Mrs. W.E. Bleick of the League of Women Voters; and F.G. Macias, chief of the Central Coast Development Field Branch of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation.

Roberts also acknowledged the receipt of letters from many groups and individuals, including: Senator John Tunney; the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association; the Fish and Wildlife Service; the Bureau of Land Management, the National Park Service; the Bureau of Indian Affairs; the Federal Power Commission; the U.S. Forest Service; the Soil Conservation Service; the Environmental Protection Agency; the State Lands Division; the Central Coastal Region of the Water Quality Control Board; Paul T. Neilsen; Col. Stanley T.B. Johnson; Rear Admiral (ret.) C.D. Wheelock; Kennedy Engineers and Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

He said this represents five or six times the usual response to letters sent out by the Corps notifying interested groups of a proposed study.

Development of Odello Ranch could be costly to school district

BY PAT GRIFFITH

The proposed $25 million Odello development will fall far short of paying its own way to the Carmel Unified School District if a new elementary school should be needed for an influx of children.

This was the rough assessment given Monday by Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor, who emphasized that he has not been contacted by the developers for the property and thus has no official data on which to base any firm conclusions.

However, at last week's hearing before the Lower Valley Advisory Committee, Carl Hooper of George Bestor & Associates estimated there might be about 400 school-age children living in the 944 homes now proposed for the development. He said a 10-acre site would be set aside which the school district could purchase for a new elementary school.

Assuming for a moment that the figure of 400 is correct, and that these children would be of elementary school age, Taylor gave this fast run-down of the costs involved:

The cost of an elementary school for 400 children would be roughly $635,000. This would include $100,000 for the land, $35,000 for site development, and $500,000 for 17 classrooms, an office, a multipurpose room and storage space, figured at the current rate of $25 a square foot for 20,000 square feet.

TOTAL COSTS

After this initial capital outlay, there would be the yearly operating budget. This hypothetical Odello elementary school would require 17 teachers, at an average annual salary of $11,000 each. This would be $187,000 a year, to which Taylor added another $54,000 to cover salaries for a principal, librarian, secretarial help and three custodians, plus the expense for maintenance, utilities and other basics. This comes to an annual outlay of $241,000 on top of the initial capital investment of $635,000.

At the current $2.72 school tax rate, Taylor continued, property assessed at $25 million would return $170,000 a year to the school district.

"In this hypothetical case, that wouldn't even pay the salaries of the staff," Taylor said, "so the development would certainly be no bargain for us. Other taxpayers within the school district would have to cough up the $635,000 for the school, plus the balance of $71,000 in annual operating expenses."

If the state legislature, as seems likely, approves some form of a state-wide school tax this year, the Carmel Unified School District faces the likelihood of being left more than $1 million short of its present budget anyway.

In that event, Taylor said, there won't be a new school in the Odello development's future.

"No way," he said flatly. "We'd simply have to go to double sessions. We couldn't pass a bond issue today, and if our tax goes up by State mandate, while our income goes down, there's no way we could raise the money for a new school. We'll just have to jam in whoever moves in , and double up on classes."

NO INFORMATION

"But again," Taylor stressed, "no developer has come to us with any information about the size of units they're planning, the cost and so forth. If we know how many bedrooms there are, and what the price is, we can estimate pretty well, based on our experience in this district, how many children there will be and at what grade levels."

Taylor said he had no figures yet to indicate what impact the 150 Riverwood townhouses and the 45 condominiums planned by Arbor Development Co. for Val Verde Drive would have on the district's schools.

Both Carmelo and River schools are operating close to capacity. An increase in elementary students, Taylor said, would probably "make us do some reshuffling. We'd have to move some from River to Woods school, where there is some room, to allow new students to go to River."

When the time comes that all three schools are filled, Taylor said, the next step would probably be to try to expand Carmelo, which was designed with future growth in mind.

If there is a sudden, sharp increase in students at the Middle School level, then changes will have to be made there, possibly eliminating some electives or otherwise shifting and enlarging classes to accommodate them.

Salinas Valley supervisors uphold Val Verde re-zoning

The long and bitter battle over the six units per-acre zoning for a parcel of land on Val Verde Drive came to an abrupt end last week when the Board of Supervisors refused, on a 2-2 tie vote, to send the matter back to the Planning Commission for re-evaluation.

Supervisor Loren Smith abstained from the vote, which had Supervisors Willard Branson and Warren Church paired in favor of returning the zoning decision to the Planning Commission, and Supervisors Arthur Atteridge and Ellis Tavernetti opposed.

The vote cleared the way for Arbor Development Co. to proceed with plans for a 45-unit development on the 7½ acre site. Plans call for "Casas de Carmel," mostly duplex-type units, to be clustered around a recreation building. A 100-foot wide putting green will separate the buildings from Carmel Valley Road.

Developer Thomas Gamboa will go before the Planning Commission next Wednesday, March 31, at 8 p.m., with an application for a use permit to build the development.

Airport approval appealed to Board of Supervisors

As expected, the Committee for Peace and Quiet filed an appeal with the County Board of Supervisors last week, asking that the board overrule the Planning Commission on several key decisions regarding the status and use of the airport.

The appeal came up at yesterday's board meeting, and was expected to be set for a public hearing on May 11 at 2 p.m.

In a two-page statement, Attorney Sean Flavin charged the Planning Commission erred in ruling earlier this month that the airport remains a legal non-conforming use even though the paved portion of the runway was extended last year from 1800 to 2400 feet.

The appeal also charges the commission with "error and abuse of discretion" in voting to approve Al Hood's requests for a use permit for a temporary office in his hanger, located on residential property, and for his Unicom radio and antenna.

UNDER THE OAKS & AMONG THE CACTI

By Mildred Hattan

A GENTLEMAN who first came to Carmel Valley in 1902 was guest of honor at a party last week celebrating his 93rd birthday. His son and daughter-in-law, Dick and Doreen McKenzie invited members of his family to a barbecue at their home. Among those attending were his wife, Frieda, a great-grandson, Christopher Hoover, who accompanied his parents Mr. and Mrs. David Hoover from their home in Menlo Park; grandchildren Stuart, David and Diane, all of the Valley, daughters, Dona McKenzie, C.V., and Evelyn Ammerman, Salinas, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Don McKenzie, jr., who came via train through the Rockies from her home in Loveland, Colo. Phoning their congratuiations to their grandfather from Colorado were Sally and Scott, children of the late Don McKenzie, jr., and Mrs. Robert Staples of Salina, Kan. Sherri, a former Valley-ite and her five children are making Kansas their home while Bob serves in Vietnam. Jean and her daughter, Susan, remained for a week's visit at Jean's cabin at White Rock.

Many pages of California's history have been written since Mr. McKenzie's arrival in 1893 with his father and brother from their native England. He first lived at the Farm Center in 1902 where he farmed what is now known as Perry MacDonald's property. He owned a ranch east of Pajaro for 20 years, was a field manager in Salinas produce for seven, and returned to the Valley to open with his daughter, Dona, one of the first restaurants at the present location of Will's Fargo known then as the Carmel Valley Inn. He was employed on Fred Godwin's La Playa Ranch (now the Tennis Ranch) for 10 years and was head gardner at Hank Ketcham's ranch for six.

Wiht his wife, Frieda, he makes his home under the oaks on Esquiline Road.

A DREAM was one giant step closer to becoming a reality when last Wednesday evening the Community Center was the scene of the official kick-off campaign for the Carmel Valley Lions-Roller Chevrolet All-American Soap Box Derby of the Monterey Peninsula. Co-Sponsors are the Monterey Sheriff's Department. Each Lion invited a boy to be his guest at the weekly dinner meeting followed by a program open to the public with Mark Christensen, winner of last year's Santa Cruz Derby, featured as the guest speaker. Mark brought his winning car, which is now displayed at Roller Chevrolet, with him. A film entitled "Derby Dream" featuring the 1970 Santa Cruz Derby showed the climax of the exciting months preceding the race which is scheduled for July 18 at the Laguna Seca Race Track.

Entries are open to any boy on the Monterey Peninsula between the ages of 11 and 15. More information and registration blanks are available at Roller Chevrolet in Monterey. A boy must be accompanied by his parent or guardian to register.

The winner of the local race will receive a $500.00 savings bond and will compete in the All-American Soap Box Derby at Akron, Ohio, in August. He will be competing for $30,000.00 worth of scholarships.

Joe Ferreira, liason officer for SCRAMP, Roy Tilly, inspection chairman for Soap Box Derby; Dr. Paul Tochett, derby doctor; Edlon Holmes, derby director for the Santa Cruz Derby; George Johnson, northwest advisor for All-American Soap Box Derby; and Rick Coleman, dealership committee chairman and sign-up chairman for the derby.

TWO WEEKS OF BEAUTIFUL WEATHER, delightful scenery and an unspoiled area did wonders for Carmel Valley's favorite librarian, Betty Shields and husband, Ken. Puerto Penasco, a small fishing village on the eastern side of the Gulf of California, was the couples' destination. They returned north through Nogales and made a circle of Arizona through Globe, Toombstone and Kingman. Greeting library patrons in her absence were Wilhelmina Higby and Marsha Lyon.

THE KIWANIS CLUB of Carmel Valley accompanied Dr. Harold Thompson as he retraced for them his trip in a camper down the coast of Mexico to Mazatlan and across the Gulf of California by ferry to La Paz in Baja California, Mexico, when he appeared last week at their Los Laureles Lodge luncheon meeting. Visitors enjoying the Mexican travelogue were Rick Holine and Glen Harnish from the Key Club, and Ralph Arndt, George Toole, Phil DiGiroland, Ken Heiland and James Malone.

IF THE EMERALD ISLE seemed a wee less green this St. Patrick's Day ... sure and it must have been borrowed for the decorations at the benefit bridge and canasta party held on the 17th at Fellowship Hall by the ladies of the Chapel Guild. Sandy Cisneros assisted by Ruth Stauffer and Helen Fitch were hostesses for a delightful party of 12 tables ... in spite of the numerous cancellations from Irishmen (and others!) who were ill with the flu.

Guests welcomed included Betty Ross of Vancouver, B.C., who was the guest of Kathaleen Wood; Katherine Brandt, Niagara, Wis. who was the guest of Gertrude Sanford; Calla Toombs of Carmel, the guest of Alice Wright; Edna Williams of Los Angeles who was the guest of Martha Sturgiss.

Eunice Tucker won first in bridge, and second place went to the Wisconsin visitor, Katherine Brandt. Recipients of the table prizes (miniature white vases with tiny green straw flowers) were Barbara Robbins, Jo Ann Peterson, Frances Wilson, Ruth Wade, Dorrie Ford and Alice Wright. Muriel Dawson went home with the "special" bridge prize and Martha Huff with the "good sport" award for giving up her seat at the bridge table to fill in for flu strickened canasta players.

Helen Fitch was in first place in the canasta scores and Martha Sturgiss won second. Table prizes went to Jenny Clark, Lucile Ambrigio, Olga Darch, Betty Des Cormier, Vera Bautz and Dolly Wolf. Special prize was claimed by Mrs. B.C. Forester.

Said social chairman, Mrs. Helen Fitch, "If we named all of those with or recovering from the flu we would name half of the Valley. So all of you hurry and get well for our April 21 party when the hostesses will be Irma Bolgard and Ruth Wade."

THREE VALLEY-ITES were named officers at the annual meeting of the Del Monte Kennel Club held at the Del Monte Lodge. Girls and their group leaders, Mrs. Larry Busick and Mrs. Nancy Hogans who were guests at the Esquiline Road home of Mrs. S.N. Trevino. The girls of the Da-Kan-ya-Yo-Ha Group are working on their Woodgatherer's Rank and received a special assist from Mrs. Trevino who with her husband lived for several years in Lima where he was a co-ordinator of education for our State Department. The girls relived the month of October when all of the ladies wear purple dresses and the gentlemen wear purple arm bands. The month is climaxed by a procession led by Peruvians bearing a painting of Senor de los Miglagaros which miraculously escaped destruction when the wall of the convent on which it was hanging during a disasterous earthquake was spared. The painting surrounded by flowers and candles is now framed in gold, born on a bed of silver, and weighs a ton.

With a background of Andean music, Dorothy served the girls the cake typical of Peru, Turron de Dona Pepe, prepared with a sugar frosting, and Maza Monda made with purple corn. They enjoyed slides of the country, their culture, (and even the slums to which Dorothy directed a great deal of volunteer effort) and viewed the numerous art objects which the Trevinos brought back with them.

CARMEL VALLEY LIONETTES held their March meeting at the Aliso Road home of Mrs. Tom Bordonaro. Plans were discussed for the annual international night held each spring and the Easter baskets which will be filled for the club's favorite patients at the Carmel Convalescent Hospital. Mrs. Lloyd Todd was appointed Sunshine Chairman while Mrs. William Stowers is recuperating. In a setting of Leprechauns, shamrocks, and Irish-gold, the birthdays of Fran Wright, Marie Tedrow, and Dorothy Dick were celebrated. Door prizes were claimed by Mrs. Roy Tilly and Mrs. John Black. Virginia introduced as her guest speaker, Mrs. Gary Fisher who presented a demonstration of cosmetics. Guests included Mrs. Roy Tilly and Sue Wright.

A TRIBUTE to Lester A. Golden's 37 years with the State Department of Fish and Game was the retirement banquet held in his honor at the Italian Villa in Salinas. A warden in the Monterey area encompassing Carmel Valley and Bug Sur since 1954, the Sage Road resident's career with the department known then as the Division of Fish and Game, began in 1937 at the Lake Tahoe hatchery. He was promoted to marine warden in 1937 and moved to Pismo Beach where he remained until 1954.

Master of ceremonies, Ellis Berry, introduced many former associates who retraced his service with the Department with anecdotes. He was presented with the traditional gold game warden's badge bearing the numeral "1" and numerous tokens of appreciation including the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Golden:

"Best wishes upon your retirement from the Department of Fish and Game after a career dating back to 1935. I was interested to learn of the varied aspects of your long years of service from the time you worked as a fish hatchery assistant near Lake Tahoe, through your exploits as a marine warden, to your present position as warden at Carmel Valley.

"I was especially impressed by reports of your part in stopping the widespread illeal commercial shellfish poaching on Pismo Beach. Your vigilance from 1937 until 1954 probably is largely responsible for the people of today being able to enjoy the recreation of clamdigging on that renowned beach.

"Again congratulations upon your retirement and thank you for a job well done.

Sincerely,
RONALD REAGAN, Governor."

Captain Howard Shelby arranged the retirement party attended by the warden's wife, Ruby, and their daughters, Leslie, Dianne and Heather.

Among friends offering congratulations and best wishes were Dorry Clanton, Bette and Ellis Berry, Pat and Charles Fullerton, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Shelby, Donald Glass, Margaret and David Smith, Mr. and Mrs.Sam Jury, Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Sorick, Maurie and Lydia Alsap, Poncho and Cookie Meadows, Vivian Ogden Holman, Howard V. ### MONTEREY PENINSULA GYMNASTIC'S CLUB

The Monterey Peninsula Gymnastic's Club has done it again! Eight girls qualified at the Zone II Championships meet at Santa Clara for the Pacific AAU Junior Olympic's Qualifying Meet to take place in Menlo Park on March 27. Beautiful performances were given by all of the Peninsula girls and a special Honors award went to Blair Meadow, daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. Batterly as the most exceptionally improved gymnist. Karen Limov, who was ill and could not participate at Santa Clara, has proven herself at other meets which automatically makes her eligible to compete at Menlo Park.

The following team members returned to the Peninsula with the following honors: Susan Schacher (10-12 age group) - with the highest All Award score for the day, won a 1st in All Around, 2nd on beam and vault, 3rd in free exercise, and 5th on the uneven bars.

Beth Faulkenberry (9 and under) took 2nd in All Around, 1st on beam, 2nd on the Uneven Bars, 5th in Vault, and 6th on the free exercise.

Anita Campbell placed 2nd in vault, 4th on beam, 6th in free exercise, and 5th in All Around.

Ann Macedo was awarded a ribbon for 5th in free exercise. Susan Davey, who is attending Santa Catalina, (her home is in Brazil) competed in the 15 and over group for a 3rd place in All Around, a 3rd in beam, a 3rd in vault, a 4th on bars and a 4th in free exercise.

Darcy Bowman (13-14) placed 2nd in vaulting.

Also working out for the Menlo Park Meet is Judy Alto whose total points meet entry requirements. Win or lose Dr. Gordon Schacher and his wife, Bobbie, stated, "We are very proud to be doing gymnastics and participating in meets. If one team-mate receives a ribbon, the other team-mates can feel that they, too, have received it by their work and contribution to the team."

CV WOMEN'S CLUB SALAD LUNCHEON

As traditionally SPRING as the fields of poppies and lupine is the annual Spring Salad Luncheon sponsored by the Carmel Valley Women's Club. Mrs. Kaye Draper is chairman this year with Mrs. Richard McKenzie has her co-chairman.

The benefit will be held March 31 at the Community Center at 12:00 p.m. Proceeds will be added to the Community Project fund. Tickets ($3.00 donation) are available from the following committee members, the chairmen or at the door. Those assisting included Mmes. Charles Finell, Edward Lloyd, Don Middleton, Shepard Peterson, Rex Pryer, Barbara Robbins, Julian Rowe, Robert Slangerup, Chris Spaulding, E.R. Starkweather, Vera Stokes, R.B. Stoney, Daniel Mayers, Howard Pearson and Miss Sara Oppenheimer.

The program will be presented by the Carmel Knit Shop including a fashion show of garments made from materials at the shop. Marie Borsella will demonstrate the creation of a knit garment and award a similiar one made to order for the cost of materials.

Other door prizes include the floral center piece, a coffee mill, a new book published by McGraw-Hill, and a luncheon for eight. Do make your plans for this pre-Easter party soon because seating is limited.

Petpourri

By JUDITH A. EISNER

EVERY ANIMAL is a potential pet to a child. Far from being content with dogs, cat and docile canaries, youngsters have an affinity for all manner of creepy, crawly, scaley creatures. Since children learn fear and revulsion from others and are not born with these feelings toward animals, they tote home frogs, toads and snakes with charming innocence and demand, "Isn't this the most beautiful snake you ever saw?" of their horrified elders.

Generally speaking, we don't feel that many of the wild creatures a child comes upon make suitable pets. At best, a captured adult frog or snake makes a grudging adaptation to a captive existence; and these creatures are possessed of too little "human" intelligence to really qualify as pets. We prefer to call them "interests".

Sooner or later every parent is going to be faced with the plea to "let me keep him" from an earnestly beseeching youngster. Or, the child will wend its way into a pet shop and come home determined to have pet mice, rats, turtles or what-have-you.

We have discussed before the care and maintenance of small rodents as pets. These include mice, rats, guinea pigs and hamsters, and they are familiar to most people and are bred in captivity.

Reptiles and amphibians as pets require greater care than the rodents for a number of reasons.

Many of these animals are of tropical origin and cannot survive except with artificial heat, in our climate. Many of them refuse to eat in captivity, or refuse to voluntarily take non-living food and so must be force-fed.

We harbor unfond memories of the period when our younger brother was "snake mad" and insisted on keeping dozens of these beasts in his room. Because the snakes would not eat if left alone, he recruited us to assist him in his force-feeding operations -- which consisted of pushing live meal worms down serpentine throats with a toothpick while these unwilling diners wrapped their coils around our arm as we held their heads in position.

How many mothers are willing to try that???

IF YOUR CHILD must have something different for his very own, we suggest you tactfully try to guide him toward turtles, at least in the beginning. Hopefully, the urge to keep reptiles will have passed before the turtles.

At most pet shops, you can purchase baby green turtles or their cousin, the red-eared turtle. They are usually about the size of a fifty-cent piece and are totally harmless. You probably had one or two when you were a child, and found they had a sad way of softening and dying within a few weeks.

Turtles are easy to raise, and given proper care, will grow with surprising speed. Within a year, a well cared for baby turtle will be the size of a small hamburger pattie, although the differences are obvious.

There are three things that either make or break turtle raising. They are heat, sunlight and diet.

These turtles are amphibians; that means they can breathe and move about on land or in the water. But they can only eat in the water. That means they must have a sufficient depth of water in which to swim and feed.

Very few people find out before it's too late that these are tropical turtles, which require a water temperature of between 70 and 80 degrees, the higher temperature being more desirable.

If you think you can buy a postic turtle bowl (the kind with the "island" and palm tree), fill it with tap water, drop turtle in and go away, you are wrong.

You can make do with such a turtle bowl, but you are going to have to rig up some kind of heat source to raise the water temperature and keep it at a fairly constant level. Infra-red lights, or a regular desk lamp shining down on the bowl may do the trick. Or they may not.

The best way to raise turtles is in an aquarium set up for tropical fish, with a heater and thermostatic control. That way, once you reach the desired water temperature, it is maintained automatically.

AN AQUARIUM FILTRATION SYSTEM will also make life easier when it comes to turtle-bowl cleaning. You will not have to change the water in the tank more than once or twice a year.

In addition to proper water temperature, turtles need an island on which to climb up and bask in the sun. If they can't climb out of the water, they will develop that characteristic "soft shell disease" and soon die. They must be able to dry off. If the tank doesn't get sufficient sunlight, an incandescent lamp will substitute in part.

Your pet turtles (or should we say your childrens') need a diet a white fish, such as halibut, cut into turtle-bite-sized pieces, live (or frozen) brine shrimp, tiny pieces of raw hamburger and occasional bits of lettuce. They'll thrive on that, and you can put some vitamins into the water just to be sure.

A conscientious pet dealer will take the trouble to explain these things to you. Some won't however. Don't think you're being conned into buying all kinds of fancy accessories for a dollar turtle. You can simplify things as much as possible, by not buying unnecessarily fancy equipment, but you'll make up the difference in the number of new turtles you won't have to replace by caring for them properly to begin with.

Turtles raised at home become surprisingly tame in a short while. They can be taken out of their bowl and put on the floor and played with, provided, of course, they are handled gently and never stepped on or dropped. Their shells afford protection, but they are far from indestructible.

Two turtles offer more amusement for a child, and he can always hold turtle races and invite the neighborhood kids in. Then, you won't be the only one who's feeding halibut to turtles!

IN RESPONSE TO NUMEROUS QUERIES, this picture of a car with the provocative bumper strips (window strips?) that so delighted Stuyvesant Fish is repeated this week, this time large enough so you'll understand what so amused the owner of Palo Corona Ranch. In a lengthy interview last week, Fish pointed out that it is others, and not he, who have pressed developments of one sort and another up against the open green hills of his famous ranch. To clarify another point—in his open challenge to the community to raise funds to purchase the Odello Ranch, Fish pledged a TOTAL of $3000 to that goal if 95 percent of the members of various property owner groups pledged a minimum of $1000 apiece. He was NOT, as some people thought, offering to match every $1000 raised with $3000 of his own.

Rudolph Fromm promoted to rank of lieutenant colonel

Lieutenant Colonel Rudolph Fromm, of Carmel Valley, a student of Persian at the Defense Language Insitute, West Coast Branch, Presidio of Monterey, was promoted to his present rank on March 12.

He is the son of Mr. William Fromm, 1452 Lower Road, Elizabeth, New Jersey, and Mrs. Anna Thever, 9 Anegada Ave., Tom's River, New Jersey.

He entered the Army in January 1957, and has served with the Saigon Civic Action Group, Saigon, Republic of Vietnam.

A 1951 graduate of Thomas Jefferson High School, Elizabeth, North Dakota, he received a bachelor of science degree in Forestry from Syracuse University, New York in 1956.

Among his medals are a Bronze Star with Two Oak Leaf Clusters, and a Distinguished Flying Cross.

Colonel Fromm and his family presently make their home at 89 Ford Road, Carmel Valley.

McCurry resigns as director

Ed McCurry resigned last week as director of Sun Springs School, citing basic differences in philosophy between himself and the school's board of directors as the reason.

McCurry had joined with several others to open the experimental school in February on the grounds of the former Rippling River Resort, a half mile east of the Village.

"When we first got together, we thought we were going in the same direction," McCurry said in a prepared statement. "After a month of operation, I find we do not agree on the amount of freedom that should be provided for youngsters, nor on how to implement that freedom. For the sake of the children involved, I deeply regret having to resign. But I cannot live with myself unless I am true to my own philosophy."

No new director has been named for the school, which at present has an enrollment of 13 students between the ages of 8 and 16. Teachers are Steve and Alice Batchelder, and Sandra Izumizaki, with part-time assistance from Mrs. Grace Petit Clerc, Mary-Mary French, Elizabeth Stimpson and Mrs. Ena Grundy.

McCurry, who resigned as principal of River School last June in order to develop plans for opening his own school, said he has no plans at present to start another school.

Valley National Bank shows remarkable growth

The seventh Annual Meeting of Shareholders of Valley National Bank was held last Thursday evening, at the Bank's new Pacific Grove Office. The Board of Directors wanted to provide an opportunity for the shareholders to acquaint themselves with the unique features provided for local area residents. Approximately 100 shareholders were in attendance.

The meeting was presided over by Director Clyn Smith and Dr. Smith introduced Charles Aucutt of Carmel, manager of the office, who pointed out features of office and introduced the staff.

Edward L. Evans, Valley National's President, gave a report on the condition of the Bank. Highlights of the year included a 39 percent increase in the number of checking accounts; now over 10,000. Almost 3000 new savings accounts were opened, bringing the year end total to 7,755. "This successful growth filled a dip in deposits which could have occurred as a result of the strike and boycott in Salinas", Evans said. Watsonville and Prunedale Offices saw significate deposit growth with Prunedale more than doubling its deposits and deposit accounts.

Fire engineer makes survey of Valley area

Greg Scott, fire apparatus engineer with the State Division of Forestry, has been surveying stores, schools and other public or quasi-public facilities in mid and lower Carmel Valley recently as part of a pre-fire planning program.

Scott is collecting data about the building materials used for each structure, number and location of occupants, contents of the building, location of sprinklers or hydrants and other information which would be useful to State Forestry fire fighters in case of a fire.

The information is filed at the State Forestry fire station on Carmel Hill, where it can be used for quick reference if needed.

The survey does not extend to private homes, Scott said, because of the time and expense involved.

During the winter and early spring months, Scott and his truck represent the full fire protection provided under contract by Monterey County for all areas of the Monterey Peninsula not protected by a local fire district.

Scott, who lives in San Jose, works four days on and three days off. He is replaced by another man who works a similar schedule, so the truck has a crew of one around the clock.

The one man and one truck cover an area extending from Marina to Big Sur, and as far up Carmel Valley as Rancho Fiesta Rd., excluding those portions which have local fire protection or are part of a county service area.

There is a dispatcher on duty at the Carmel Hill station who could notify Scott by radio of any fire occuring in his territory when he is away from the station on other department business. Scott said he keeps his radio on at all times, so he can hear it even when he is inside a building.

EMERGENCY CALLS

Hot ashes placed in a flammable container led to a fire in a stable and storage shed by the home of Mrs. Joan Bennett on Laurel Drive Friday night, causing over $1,000 damage.

Arriving on the scene within four minutes, volunteers from the Carmel Valley Fire Department were able to keep the fire from spreading to the Bennett home, which was connected to the shed. Twenty-two men and five pieces of equipment were used in putting out the blaze, which was reported at 11:09 p.m. Horses were rescued from the stable before firemen arrived.

Last Wednesday afternoon, Sharon Lee Tower, 27, of 64 Paso Hondo, and her four-month-old son, Jason, were injured in an accident on Laureles Grade.

Mrs. Tower was driving south on the Grade when the accelerator pedal on her car stuck. The car ran into a dirt embankment, hurling the infant into the dashboard.

Both were taken to Community Hospital by the Carmel Valley Fire Department's Red Cross ambulance, where Mrs. Tower was treated for numerous bruises and the child for a fractured skull.

Another Carmel Valley resident, John Dawe of 110 El Hemmorro, was injured last Wednesday night in a head-on collision on the Monterey-Salinas Highway.

The California Highway Patrol reported Dawe was driving west on the highway when his car drifted across the center line and struck a car driven by Paul Taylor of Salinas headon. Dawe was taken to Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital with minor injuries. Taylor was treated at the hospital and released.

Obituaries

ALICE SECKELS

Private funeral services were held last week for Alice Seckels, 88, who died in her Carmel Valley home following a long illness.

Miss Seckels was a native of Butte, Mont., and spent her childhood in Salt Lake City and Peru, where her father was an official of a copper company.

She moved to San Francisco in 1915, where she launched a highly successful career as a concert and lecture manager. During a span of 30 years she presented such artists as Yehudi Menuhin, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Will Rogers and Cornelia Otis Skinner. She also brought explorers Lowell Thomas and Prince William of Sweden to San Francisco.

She retired in 1947 and moved to Carmel, where she began a new career in ceramics. She specialized in leaf forms and designs. More recently she had lived at Carmel Valley Manor.

Contributions are preferred to a charity of the donor's choice.

VIBRATIONS

On a roadside bathed in sunlight,
Where the air was warm and still,
There I built myself a homesite
On an overlooking hill.

It was peaceful on my byway
'Til they widened out the road,
And they made my lane a highway
Where the heavy traffic flowed.

Oh, the noise of motors roaring,
Open mufflers shocked my ear,
Followed by the airplanes soaring
When an airport opened near.

Oh, I grant that modern science
Has its merits and its joys,
But deplore the meek compliance
With unnecessary noise.

Let us then be up and doing,
'Ere we lose more precious ground;
Action stirs more stumps than stewing,

Carmel Valley architect designs sets f

BY PAT GRIFFITH

Visualize, for a moment, a Hollywood television executive looking about for the Right Man to design an imaginative set for a major new children's series which is going to compete with Sesame Street next fall.

Where does he find the creative designer with young ideas who can turn a "Curiosity Shop" theme into an appealing, versatile set that will hold the attention of restless 6 to 12-year-olds? Among the high-powered bright young men in New York: A successful producer of children's theater, perhaps, or maybe a budding talent from an independent filmmaker?

When ABC faced this decision early last fall, they made a beeline for a man who is not young, who is not part of the theatrical milieu and who had not designed a set for anything since he attended the University of California at good many years ago -- Robert Stanton of Carmel Valley.

Known across the nation as a distinguished architect of public buildings and several showplace homes (the Bob Hopes' home in North Hollywood, the Stewart Hopps' house in Belvedere, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks' mansion "Pickfair"), Stanton had never before been offered an assignment quite like this one.

"How would you like," an emmissary from ABC asked, "to design a gazebo, an animal wall, a manhole, a fireplace and a computer and somehow make them all part of a 'Curiosity Shop' that will stimulate a child's natural curiosity?"

Naturally Stanton was intrigued. His unexpected visitor was barely out the door of Stanton's small, wood-paneled office at the Normandy Inn, when the architect began sketching a few ideas.

Work continued at his drafting board in his working office at his home on Scarlett Road. A week later Stanton was able to show Chuck Jones, vice president and executive director of children's programming for ABC, the first preliminary drawings of the "Curiosity Shop" set, a 30 x 60- foot triangle that would permit long camera shots on the diagonals.

In three weeks' time he had a model of the set completed, and Jones told him "It looks as if you've been designing sets all your life."

Stanton did all the drawings for the various features of the "Curiosity Shop" full-size, which meant some were 13 feet high.

"I had more fun," he chuckles. "The whole job only took eight or nine weeks of drawing."

Assisting him at every step along the way was his wife, Virginia, the former party editor of House Heautiful magazine who is color-coordinator for the project. Together the Stantons scouted import shops, flea markets and decorator showrooms for items that could be used on the set.

A big brass bed they found in a barn on the way to Watsonville is now part of the seals' "bedroom" in the Curiosity Shop. Some animal heads carved from monkey pod wood, which they found at Imports & at the mouth of the Valley, have been incorporated into the decor of the animal wall, which resembles a large circus wagon.

IDEAS FROM EVERYWHERE

They added Indian screens from Cost Plus, turned 75 cent teakwood and brass ashtrays into hardware for a magic elevator, and chose a bright orange paper fish mobile from Thailand to dangle in the middle of the gazebo.

Early in January Stanton worked briefly with cartoonist Hank Ketchum, who designed a special Curious George tree house which is also part of the multi-faceted set.

"They told us to do whatever we wanted to with the set," Stanton says with genuine amazement. "We had a whole department at our disposal. They said this was the first time a set was done before there was any writing for a program."

Shooting of the first of 34 programs started last week. Each show will be built around an individual theme, ranging from something as specific as "thumbs" or "weather" to abstract concepts such as "hearing" or "emotions" or "relativity." Background music will be composed by none other than Henry Mancini.

It all adds up to another major accomplishment in Stanton's remarkable career. An engineering graduate from the University of California, where his only previous theatrical experience came as stage manager for the Little Theater, he has specialized since 1935 in the design of public buildings, especially hospitals and schools.

He co-designed the circular Mission Trails Building at the San Francisco World's Fair, which featured a diorama of the Portola expedition.

The King City High School auditorium, which he designed, is considered one of the finest auditoriums in the United States. He has been a consultant on hospital design for the Federal Works Agency and for the California Department of Public Health, and has also served with the California Senate Interim Committee on Public Works.

The beautiful home which he planned with his wife in Carmel Valley created so much comment in architectural circles that it was featured in the July 1949 issue of House Beautiful magazine.

The writers and photographers who came out to "cover" the Stanton's home were so impressed by Mrs. Stanton's gourmet meals and attractive decor that she was asked to be party editor for the magazine. She held that job from 1949 to 1964, doing hundreds of table settings for color photography and setting up many of House Beautiful's covers.

Her flair for table settings will be seen locally during the 24th annual Adobe Home Tour in Monterey on April 24.

Mrs. Stanton has written a book, "Guide to Successful Entertaining," and is presently chairman of the California Arts Commission.

Filled with eager anticipation for the debut of the "Curiosity Shop" this fall, the Stantons may find themselves spending Saturday mornings at the homes of understanding friends. Television cable service doesn't extend to their home on Scarlett Road, so the creators of one of the most unusual TV stage sets in history are, believe it or not, without a television set of their own.

TALKING TO THE ANIMALS who will be regular visitors to the "Curiosity Shop," Virginia and Bob Stanton check out another feature of the mammoth set they designed for ABC-TV. The animal wall, which resembles a circus cage, was originally a giant highboy. To the left is a calliope. Stanton also designed an elevator which moves sideways as well as up and down, an "alphabet wall" and an intriguing computer that can blink out answers to innumerable questions.

THE PHONE BOOTH

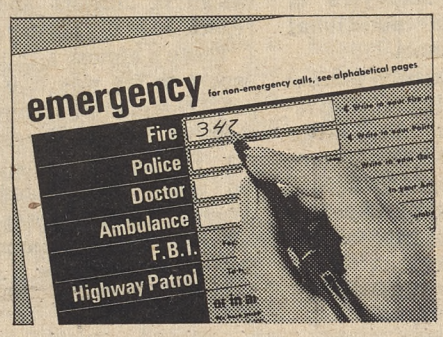
Here's a reminder of what to do if you ever receive a malicious or obscene phone call: simply hang up. Most anonymous callers will be discouraged if they can't find an audience. (In addition, never give your phone number to an unknown caller.) If such calls continue, however, please notify our Business Office. We have employees trained to handle these problems, and many of these callers have been identified. We're working closely with law enforcement agencies to convict violators, which can result in fines and imprisonment. We want to do all we can to help protect your privacy.



Do you have the phone numbers of your doctor, the police and the fire department written inside the front cover of your phone book? If you haven't already put them there, why not take time right now to do it. Then you'll know right where to look if you need them in a hurry. In an emergency, dialing the number direct could save moments that really count.

It's income tax time again, and if you need help, just call the IRS in Salinas, 1-424-8092. Personal service is also available each Monday from 9-5 at the Monterey USO, on El Estero and Webster. They'll be glad to answer your questions.

Advisory Committee

asks freeze on Odello plans

The Lower Valley Advisory Committee has voted unanimously to urge the County Planning Commission to clamp a six-month freeze on the start of any construction on the Odello property, in order to give those opposed to a major development time to raise money for an alternate plan.

In the meantime, the committee agreed, the present proposal for a resort, health spa and clusters of medium and low-density housing should go back to San Francisco architects Sasaki-Walker for some major pruning.

These were the major recommendations made after a lengthy public hearing on the Odello plan, which drew over 100 people to the library of Carmelo School last week.

The audience was clearly on the side of those opposed to development—any development—of the artichoke fields, and applauded frequently as one person after another challenged Carl Hooper of George Bestor & Associates, engineers for the project, on everything from potential environmental damage to the cost to taxpayers of providing an additional elementary school.

General discussion was cut off after two hours of give-and-take, and the large crowd drifted away before committee members agreed the plans should go back to the drawing boards for the following reasons:

1. The entire project is too resort-oriented. Transient facilities should be cut in half, from 900 to 450 units, with the acreage left as is.

2. All structures, including fences, should be a minimum of 100 feet from the property lines on Highway 1, with room allowed for eventual widening of the highway to four lanes. This strip along the highway should be landscaped and maintained by the developer.

3. There should be a 25 foot height limit on all buildings (some structures in the existing proposal go up to 32 feet). The main concern here is to guard against any tall "wall" developing along the western edge of the property.

4. There should be no retail uses in the development except those ancillary to the transient facilities.

5. Lagoons should be a minimum of six feet deep, not five feet as shown on present plans, to stop the growth of marsh weeds.

6. There should be a varied number of units in physically-connected buildings, but a maximum of eight units per structure.

7. Something should be done to relieve the geometric design of clusters and the repetition of the cluster plan. ("There's almost a military aspect to the way it is laid out," commented committee member William Cranston.)

8. Residential density is too high, and should be lowered from the proposed 944 units to a maximum of 795, which would be a mid-way point in the range of densities suggested in the Three Ranches Plan.

9. The property should be covered by Flood Plain (FP) zoning.

After hearing the committee's views, Hooper protested that if the density figures are lowered, "there will have to be a change elsewhere, which means the developer has to reduce quality.

"When we talk about 450 transient units," Hooper said, "in essence that's the same as 45 acres of G zoning (resort permitted with use permit, 10 units per acre density). That puts the rest of the property down to a density of 3.2 units per acre, so you're getting into the standard suburban type of development ... and in that case you'd lose your greenbelt."

Cranston strongly disagreed. "I can't go along with the economic theory that the more you put in there, the better it will be," he said. "Following that theory, Del Monte Properties would have a nicer place if they doubled the capacity of the Lodge."

Hooper also protested the recommendation for a six-month moratorium on actual construction, although admitting that it will take six months for the developers to complete all the advance paperwork anyway.

"The moratorium places us in the position of being unable to negotiate with the operators of the lodge, for example," Hooper said. "I think the feeling is the Odellos have gone all through this before, and no one has been able to come up with the money."

"You know you are up against a lot of opposition. You saw it here tonight," committee chairman St. E.P. Tyner replied. "I think it would be worth it to you, in terms of goodwill, to give them an opportunity to do what they think they can, to try to come up with a plan that would be acceptable to the Odellos. It's not a question of whether the people can do it -- and frankly I hope they can -- but of showing good faith with them."

"Who are 'they', anyway?" asked another consultant on the Odello proposal.

Tyner smiled. "I might interest you to know that I have received over 200 telephone calls from 'they' recently. 'They' are the people."

Earlier in the evening, 'they' had indeed been heard from.

'They' included Carmel attorney Fred Farr, who announced he planned to meet with Nature Conservancy in San Francisco on Wednesday to seek financial support to buy the Odello property outright.

"It is not too late for positive action," Farr said, suggesting that part of the $3.7 million purchase price might be raised by having a limited commercial zone along the highway across the river from Safeway.

Further, he said, a combination of the Carmel Sanitary District, federal and state park funds, grants from wildlife conservation groups and individual donations might well raise enough to purchase the property for a permanent greenbelt.

He said an office has been opened at the Vista Lobos Apartments on 7th Street between Monte Verde and Lincoln in Carmel, telephone 624-2820, to promote and coordinate fund-raising efforts.

"What is most important is that we who live here put our money where our mouth is," Farr declared to a crescendo of applause.

'They' also included rancher Stuyvesant Fish, who read his "open challenge" to the community, printed elsewhere in this paper, to buy the Odello fields by private subscription, and Mrs. William Moore, who added the League of Women Voters' opposition to the proposed development.

Mark Brennan, chairman of the Carmel Meadows Property Owners Association, stepped forward with a recommendationthat the Odello proposal be rejected and "ways and means be developed to preserve this area as a green belt, while at the same time assuring the present owners of just compensation."

The association's resolution said this might be accomplished through a tax increase, a bond issue and or federal or state legislation providing income tax relief for the owners.

Also rising to speak was Mary Sigourney of Carmel Valley, who stated that "as people, we have no quarrel with the owners of the property. They have worked hard on the land and obviously are going to sell it. But I think we do have a quarrel with the developers ... for bringing in increased density and sewage problems. That's a desecration of Carmel Bay ..."

Others in the audience strongly protested putting a large resort hotel next to a major bird and wildlife sanctuary, and charged that the proposed development would raise taxes locally because of the need for more services and an additional school.

Hooper countered that a homeowners' association would pay for the maintenance of roads within the development, and that county service areas would be formed for drainage and fire protection.

"These units will generate more taxes per acre than a comparable development on 6000 foot lots," Hooper said.

Another member of the audience, Dan Scott, said that he objects to the plan

Master plans, other studies available at Carmel library

The reference librarian at Harrison Memorial Library, Sheila Baldridge, prepared the following list of area plans and other pertinent documents relating to the large-scale developments planned for the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas.

These documents can be seen during regular library hours at the library, located at Ocean and Lincoln.

Monterey County General Plan, Monterey Cty. Planning Comm., 1968;

Carmel Highlands - Riviera Master Plan, Monterey Cty. Planning Comm., 1969;

Monterey County Coast Master Plan, Monterey Cty. Planning Comm., 1962;

The Peninsula Tommorrow (3 parts) Monterey Peninsula Area Planning Commission, 1959-1963;

Carmel Master Plan, City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, 1955-56;

General Plan for the City of Carmel, City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, 1959;

A sociological study of the Monterey Area, Monterey City Planning Comm., 1968;

An economic analysis of the Monterey Area, Monterey City Planning Comm., 1969;

A circulation study of the Monterey Area, Monterey City Planning Comm., 1969;

Odello Ranch: statement of plan concepts, Sasaki, Walker Associates, 1971;

Focus on Monterey County: an economic study of the Salinas-Monterey Metropolitan Area, Bank of America, 1967;

Flood Plain information on the Carmel River, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 1967; and Salinas-Monterey Scenic Highway Committee Report, 1966.

ALL EYES WERE FOCUSED on Carl Hopper as he described plans for a major recreational-residential development planned for the Odello ranch at the mouth of the Valley for an overflow crowd at Carmelo school. Facial expressions seem to run the gamut from serious to grim. One thing for sure -- no one fell asleep during the lengthy presentation or the lively question and answer session that followed.

Photos by George T.C. Smith

"because the people in Carmel and Carmel Valley are the ones who will pay for the land to build the school, and then will pay for the school and the teachers for a long time to come. This all reminds me of Foster City in San Mateo ... after the schools were built there, on what had been swamp land, the people in San Mateo found they were paying for it all."

Hooper argued that the proposed plan is "well-balanced between residential and business-commercial uses." He unintentionally provoked gales of laughter when he went on to state that the 900 resort and hotel rooms "will produce a very substantial ad valorem tax and will not generate children."

When the laughter subsided, Tyner said that "what I think Mr. Hooper is trying to say, is that these units will not generate children who will remain in this area."

The advisory committee's recommendations will be considered by the Planning Commission when the Odello plan comes up for its first public hearing before that group on March 31 at 7:30 p.m.

LWV opposes Odello zoning change

The League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula went on record last week as opposing any change in zoning on the Odello property which would lead to a high density development.

Representing the League before the Lower Valley Advisory Committee, Mrs. William Moore said that after extensive study, the League has agreed "to support the control of building so that it does not outrun water supply and sewage facilities, nor cause noise or air pollution.

"We believe that development should conform to the goals of the area general plan, which includes conservation of scenic resources through the preservation of coastal areas and waterways.

"We question whether the Monterey Peninsula can tolerate the added burden of nearly 4,000 people, their cars and the added facilities they would require without detriment to the quality of the environment. We are concerned as to the cost to the taxpayers of providing the necessary services.

"Therefore we oppose a change in zoning of the Odello property to allow the high density for which the developers are asking."

Mrs. Moore also gave the committee members a copy of the following "Criteria for Development" which the League plans to send to the Monterey County Planning Commission before the March 31 hearing on the Odello plans:

The League believes that development on the Peninsula should meet the following criteria:

1. Consideration should be given to public need for development and fulfillment of the requirements of the existing population.

2. Development should conform to the goals of an area general plan.

3. Geological, sociological and economic effects of developments should be determined by study of:

a. Geological factors: earthquake and landslide hazard, sand dune movement and tidal water danger, equifers and flood plains.

b. Sociological factors: conservation of nature, preservation of historic sturctures, public health and safety, sewage disposal, prevention of air and noise pollution, preservation of natural park areas such as creeks and slopes, diversified planning within the development.

c. Economic factors: expected tax revenue and short term economic gains in relation to cost of providing essential services (fire and police protection, schools, sewage disposal, water supply, etc.) and long range cost of destruction of the area's environmental assets.

. . . And High Income, too!

THIS ARTIST'S DRAWING for the proposed 150-unit Riverwood development won a recommendation favoring design approval from the Lower Valley Advisory Committee last week. Approval came after architect Tom Dobrusky presented several new sketches of the two-story town house condominiums.This basic layout is the same in earlier presentations, but the roof lines have now been broken up to get away from a barracks-like appearance. Dobrusky said there will be an open area between the buildings and the river which will be maintained as a park "so the view across this area and up the hills (of the Fish ranch in the background) will be very pleasant." The committee's recommendation will be forwarded to the Planning Commission for final action.

Burglars ransack two homes

A family collection of silver coins and an assortment of guns, some dating back to the Civil War, were stolen from the home of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Russell on Chaparral Road Sunday afternoon.

A second burglary was reported occuring at about the same time at the new residence of Dr. Douglas Courtney, 350 El Cammito. The Courtneys, who were in the process of moving into their home, reported a few furnishings missing.

Russell reported the burglar or burglars broke a kitchen window to gain entry into the house sometime between 12:45 and 3:45 p.m. Closets and drawers were ransacked. The guns, taken from two different closets in the family room, included an antique shotgun and a dueling pistol from the Civil War, a World War I German bayonet, a deer hunting rifle and a double barreled shotgun.

The burglars also helped themselves to a bobcat skin rug that was hanging on a wall in the living room.

Russell said he thinks he may have interrupted the burglars, because he discovered a hi fi speaker abandoned by an open sliding door. The rest of the hi fi set was still inside.

CARMEL SCHOOL BOARD CANDIDATES await their turn to speak at a forum at Carmel Middle School last week. Moderator for the evening was Clayton Neill Jr., standing center. The candidates for the three vacancies to be filled in the April 20 election are, left to right: Glen A. Myers, Mrs. Pamela Smith, Richard Wilsdon (standing) Robert Oross, Mrs. Adele McFann, Mrs. Elinor Horne, Hilton Bialek and Dr. Charles Snorf.

Public has look at school board candidates

A member of the audience which filled the Carmel Middle School library last week asked the eight candidates who are vying for three seats on the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education the following question:

Are the district's teachers "keeping up with the times?" Are they in step with contemporary teaching methods and theories?

Dr. Charles Snorf said, Yes, "he thought so."

Pamela Smith also said, Yes, "the teachers are trying very hard."

Robert Oross said teachers are trying to indoctrinate students.

Glen A. Myers said he thought teachers in the district are keeping up with the times "and maybe they're a little ahead" of them.

Richard Wilsdon said he thought they were keeping up.

And so did Adele McFann.

Elinor Horne said the teachers have set an "unrealistic pattern" for themselves and are having trouble "fitting into it." She said there was "not enough subject matter being taught" and "too much indoctrination."

Hilton Bialek said it depended on the teacher. While some are keeping up with the times, he said you could walk into the classes of some teachers and "you wouldn't know what year it was."

The candidates will probably be answering many such questions through April 20, the day three of them will be elected to four-year terms on the board. Of the eight, Bialek and Wilsdon are incumbents (Steven Sassoon decided not to run again), Wilsdon being the president of the board.

Tuesday night the candidates made five-minute statements on why they were running and what ideas they had to improve district education if elected, and then moderator Clayton Neill opened the floor to questions.

Bialek, a research psychologist, said that if re-elected he would push for the introduction of two basic concepts—accountability and alternatives.

Through accountability, he said, the student and his parents would communicate to the district and the teacher what they wanted the student to learn. "Once this is established," he said, "it is reasonable to hold the teacher and the school accountable" for any failure in the endeavor.

Because teachers and parents might have differing ideas as to what is educationally important, "alternatives" in the student's educational program could be arrived at which would "give more flexibility," he said.

Wilsdon, an attorney, in his statement pointed out that the district has not had to undergo problems prevalent on many other campuses and in other districts.

He said that the district has had few incidents of student dissension, and attributed this to the district's efforts to establish a curriculum compatable to "what students think is more relevant today," plus an effort to communicate with them.

While other districts have had teacher strikes, or threats of them, Wilsdon said, "here we have the kind of relationship with our teachers where we can work out problems without the threat of a strike."

Mrs. Horne, a Carmel Valley housewife, was highly critical of teaching methods in the district, the board, and the California Federation of Teachers (CFT), and the 39 district teachers who belong to it.

Picturing students as the "prey" of counselors and teachers, she also stated that the position of trustee of the board of education was a position of public trust and asked, "Have the incumbents seeking re-election always justified that trust?"

She criticized the CFT for supporting, in a resolution, "avowed" Communist Angela Davis, and wondered why the district's nine administrators received salaries totaling, she said, $190,000.

Mrs. McFann, a stock trader, said that if elected she would "offer a willingness to listen and learn."

She said she would "encourage responsible education," and would be receptive to ideas to improve the schools from anyone who had an interest.

"I feel I'm running to preserve the best of what we have," Myers said.

Myers, who teaches electrical engineering at the Naval Postgraduate School, said that besides the "3 Rs," the district must recognize that it has the responsibility to instill in students the background they will need to "adapt to society."

He also warned that a proposed state-wide tax is likely to become law, and that the school board should be composed of members who will be able to deal with the shortage in funds the tax would result in.

Robert Oross, a carpenter and a member of the Carmel Valley fire department, said that the main reason he was running for the board was that "some board members have not been responsive" to public pleas and questions.

As an example of this, he said, he was refused a spot on a board meeting agenda to question a district educational program in a social studies department.

He questioned the quality of teachers and materials "in some classes" and said that the district should abandon "experiments" in education and "permissiveness" in favor of "proven education."

Mrs. Smith, a Carmel Valley housewife, who attended Carmel schools from first through 12th grade said, "I feel the district's courses should be constantly evaluated."

"The most important cog in education is the teacher," she said. "I would encourage an extensive hiring policy to bring the best teachers to Carmel."

Dr. Charles Snorf, an orthopedia surgeon, laid out his philosophy for a responsive and effective board of education:

"First, you have to get all of the facts." Then, he said, listen to all sides, and (to the laughter of the audience) "avoid hysteria. Then don't quit until you solve the problem."

Dr. Snorf said he was concerned with discipline in the district. Stating that some of his friends were sending their children to private schools, he asked, "I wonder why they're losing faith in the public school system?"

He said he felt the district needed a better college preparatory program and wondered if the district was getting its full value from the high school tax rate.

Mary Lubeck of Carmel, who displayed a bulletin which was distributed to high school students and which advertises college preparatory courses at other schools, asked why a student who has graduated from Carmel High School should not be qualified and prepared to enter college without paying to take outside courses.

Bialek said that ideally the school system would turn out students all capable of continuing on into college, but the "system is not perfect."

Wilsdon said similar bulletins are probably sent to every district in the state.

"I think it is unrealistic to ask any school to be able to qualify a large percent of its students for college," Myers said.

Douglas Graham said he was concerned about what the district was training students for—future education or "the world after high school?"

Bialek said the goal was to make the student "as flexible as possible," while Wilsdon said he thought the system was "still role and goal oriented."

Wilsdon stated that the district was doing an excellent job with the bulk of students but had to improve its programs for the gifted and the slow learners.

Mrs. Horne said she thought the system should be coordinated so that the youth would be prepared to advance into higher education or go out into the world.

Stating that vocational educational programs are expensive, but that they are needed for those not continuing on to college, Mrs. McFann said that a community-wide effort might be the way to develop a more comprehensive program.

A lack of cooperation by the unions has hurt the vocational program, Wilsdon said, explaining that they won't supply the district with information as to what their needs are, or in what positions they have more help than required.

Students are beginning to realize that college is not necessarily needed for the "good rich life," Myers said, predicting that in the next decade high schools will concentrate more on the arts and the trades.

Mrs. Smith concurred that students more and more are thinking of staying out of school a year or two. She said she would like to see all students learn some practical skill so that they would always be able to get work but, she added, she would not want to see the regular educational program suffer.

Oross said that the best preparation for life is "a good solid education" and a sense of American heritage.

To a question on Bialek's "accountability" concept, Wilsdon said that once the goal is set it is not all that easy to determine when it has been met. "Testing techniques are not that precise," he said.

Dr. Snorf disagreed. If at the end of the year the student doesn't pass his final test, he said, the teacher has failed.

Myers stated, however, that some subjects, such as drama and art, are not easily tested.

Oross, who said that too many classes were concerned with "experiencing," not leaving enough time for learning, was asked by John Hicks if he would change the curriculum if elected.

Oross said he would try to change some things that he questioned and then added, "I'm happy with some things, unhappy with others I don't want to be completely negative."

All of the candidates have or have had, children attending district schools.

Bazaar Saturday to benefit Carmelite nuns

New Easter outfits are among the items being prepared by Carmelite nuns for their children's bazaar Saturday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. at All Saints Church parish hall.

The nuns, who stay at the Carmelite Monastery on Highway 1, also will display stuffed toys, children's stationery, dolls, plaques and wool ponchos.

Proceeds go for maintenance of the monastery and grounds.

Homemade bread and cookies also will be sold as well as such religious gifts as rosaries and First Communion sets.

A special feature of the day will be a drawing with a grand prize of a Pat Meyer mural for a child's room.

Other prizes will be announced later.

Tickets for the drawing are $1 each. There is no charge for admittance to the bazaar.

"Bring the kids and let them choose," suggests one of the sisters.

Father David Hill, All Saints rector, invited the sisters to use the parish hall.

"All I want is one of the vestments they make," he said. "I'll even pay for it. I've wanted one for years."

The nuns are cloistered, with only one or two sisters working regularly in the area open to the public. The monastery is located on the highway 2½ miles south of Carmel.

Their rule is to contemplate, praise and worship and to pray continually for the needs of humanity. They also have the goal to be self-sufficient in the maintenance of the monastery and grounds as a contribution to the general community in this area.

It is almost impossible for them to care for the grounds which are being constantly visited by a great number of tourists. Money received from the sale of their items helps them to retain the rugged tree-filled beauty of the area.

The monastery land was donated by the Francis J. Sullivan family in 1931. Bishop John B. MacGinley, D.D., the first bishop of the diocese of Monterey-Fresno, travelled to Rome in 1925 to attend the canonization ceremony of St. Therese of the Infant Jesus. At that time he had an audience with Pius XI and asked permission to found a monastery of cloistered nuns under the spiritual guidance of the newly canonized saint.

Construction of the monastery began when the land became available.

Kite Festival coming up soon

It's time to get out the strips of balsa wood, some paper and lots of string. Carmel's 41st annual Kite Festival is fast approaching, scheduled this year for Saturday, April 17 on the grounds of Carmel Middle School.

The usual regulations for this popular contest will apply. Each kite entered must be hand-made and must actually get into the air and fly in order to be eligible for a prize. Any kite entered in any previous year cannot be entered again this time.

Each kite may be entered in only one of the four age groups—8 years and younger, 9 through 12 years, 13 through 15 years and 16 years and over. In each age group there will be three prizes awarded: highest flying kite, best workmanship and prettiest kite.

An additional prize category will be included for children 12 years and younger who make their kites without adult assistance.

In addition to these prizes, the Willis White Trophy for the best design and the Ernest Calley perpetual plaque trophy for the grand champion kite will be awarded, both donated by the Carmel Lions Club.

The kite festival was founded by the Rev. Willis White in 1930. It was directed for many years by Ernest Calley, a shop teacher at the former Sunset School, who continued to direct the festival for several years after his retirement. In the mid 1950's the recreation department of the Carmel Unified School District took over the event, which is co-sponsored by the Carmel Lions Club.

Auditions to open for 'Hello, Dolly!' at Studio

"Hello, Dolly!" will be one of the summer musicals at the Studio Theatre in Carmel, for which auditions will be held Sunday, April 4, at 2:30 p.m. and Monday, April 5, at 7:30 p.m. The other will be "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying."

About 35 parts are open in the two shows for leads, principals, singers and dancers covering a wide range of age and experience.

In addition to the title role, made famous by Carol Channing in the Broadway run that surpassed "My Fair Lady" there are good feminine roles in "Hello, Dolly!" for the young widow Malloy, her millinery assistant, Minnie Fay, and several others.

The male leads are Horace Vandergelder, the wealthy Yonkers merchant on whom Dolly has her matchmaking eye, and his two clerks, Cornelius and Barnaby, whose fling in the big city brings the plot to a head.

Candidates for the role of Dolly should come prepared to sing the title song, but others may audition for either show with selections of their own choosing.

"How To Succeed" a tale of rags to riches in the executive suite, ran 1400 performances on Broadway with Robert Morse as the irrepressible Finch and Rudy Vallee as the pompous Mr. Biggley. There are strong principal roles for Biggley's nephew Frump and a variety of businessman characters.

The feminine lead of Rosemary demands an excellent singing voice, while Biggley's protegees, Hedy LaRue, must be sultry and shapely. Miss Jones and Smitty head a contingent of secretaries and file clerks.

The two summer musicals will run successively, one opening in mid-June and the other early in August for about 30 performances each. Both productions will be directed and choreographed by Bill Asp with Greg Granoff as musical director.

Further information concerning the parts available and arrangements for alternative audition times may be obtained by calling 624-1661 or 624-2321.

Mountain climbing film to premiere here

Scot Smythe of Pebble Beach will be seen in "And the Ground Below," a film on mountain climbing which has its California premiere April 9-10 at the Tantamount Theater in Carmel Valley.

Scott is shown doing the "goose step", an advanced snow climbing technique.

The film is sponsored by Portia Mansfield of Carmel and presents student climbers from the Perry-Mansfield Boys Camp in Steamboat Springs, Colo.

Len Aitken of Denver photographed the film. Another of his films, "Kayak", will be shown on the same program at the Tantamount. "Kayak" will appear on National Educational T.V. in April.

"And the Ground Below" was released this year and has been previewed across the country, according to Miss Mansfield. She is pleased with the reception, illustrated in a report from Mrs. Otto Bach of the Denver Art Museum:

"In every instance the individuals who saw the film were most enthusiastic about the absolute beauty of the composition, the wonderful motion, and the exquisite color. We enjoyed the films very much indeed."

CARMEL WOMAN'S CLUB TO SHOW SPECIAL FILM

"The Avery Brundage Collection of Asian Art" will be a film shown at the Carmel Woman's Club April 5 at 2 p.m., Mrs. G.C. Galland, program chairman, announces. This $40,000,000 gift to the City of San Francisco comprises bronze, porcelain, jade and ceramics -- some dating back to 3,000 B.C.

Brundage, the internationallyfamous athlete, builder and staunch supporter of the Olympics, started his collection in 1935. In addition to finding his treasures in their native countries he was able to secure the cream of the assets of Japanese art dealers in the United States after Pearl Harbor when their merchandise was impounded and sold. This greatest collection of Asian art put together by a single person in modern times is now properly housed in a wing financed by the City of San Francisco on the M.H. de Young Museum.

A second film, "China By theGolden Gate", will also be shown.

All flower arrangements are by flower chairman, Mrs. John T. Bissell. Pouring will be Mmes. Myrtle Cleek, Frank Culin, E.M. Davis, A.C. Derrick.

Hostesses are Mmes. Thornton Allen, Aimee B. Charlton, Floyd C. Dillon, C.O. Hooker, Fred H. Kurz, Kenneth Threlkeld, Geo. H. Weatherbe, Miss Effie Theobald.

Santa Catalina Pre-school Play Area

Two years of nursery school and one year of Kindergarten will open this September at The Santa Catalina School in Monterey.

Two large classrooms have been remodeled in proportion to young children and their needs, an enclosed courtyard furnished with play equipment and in this new facility two especially trained lay teachers will guide classes limited to 25 children.

The program is geared to serve as an aid at each individual level of comprehension in approaching math reading and writing readiness, as well as religion and the fine arts.

BY MRS. B.C. FORRESTER

In 1784 Richard, the seventh earl of Barrymore, entered the famous English Public School, Eton, known at that time to be a "tough" school, difficult in which to survive. A fierce, drunken headmaster, Dr. Davies, was in control and kept the boys under continuous punishment, whipping, beating and starving them for the least or no infraction of rules.

Richard was eleven years old and according to the standards of the day a little old for entering, four, five or six years was the usual age at which young ones entered the great public schools. There were no entrance requirements, and Dr. Roberts, who incidentally ran a gambling ring inside the school,was in charge of registrations. It is not likely he would refuse to admit another young "pigeon" for the plucking.

Barrymore was an orphan, left in the care of his maternal grandmother, who could think of nothing better for the little boy than to take his place in Eton with a good allowance, where he might sink or learn to swim among young people of his time. She was generous and it is reported that Barrymore's one thousand pounds a year enabled him and his few chosen pals to eat well in the village while most of the school was on the verge of starvation. Meat was almost unknown at the tables and only the biggest and strongest got a share of the little that appeared. Beau Brummel was enrolled at Eton a few years earlier, once said he went awhole term without once having a dinner. Small boys were lucky to be allowed to dip their bread into the gravy of the bigger boys, who were strong enough to get a share.

Naturally such lack of proper supervision and lack of food, led to stealing from the markets and shops, and the smuggling of food and beer into the houses by back windows or with the help of servants on the school staff who were well disposed toward the "poor lads" or welcomed what they got from such assistance.

From various reports, student rebellions and town riot formed a large part of the school activities during a term. There was no equipment for play or sport, for which Dr. Davies saw no need. Real cruelty was the game the older boys played continually on the younger, and usuaully involved the getting of food by hook or crook.

From 1775 to 1790, which was the term of Dr. Davies headmastership at Eton, dinners in the European world were no light matter. George III was on the throne of England, Louis XVIII ruled France and the first restaurant was opened in 1782. People enjoyed eating and plump women were admired.

The following menu is from a gentleman's kitchen, and was not more than most gentlemen served their guests:

Soup, with little onions
Second Course
Steaks of swordfish, baked.
Entrees, five.

Turbot, sauteed — Eel, with Tartar sauce.
Cucumber, stuffed with marrow — Vol au Vent of Chicken Breasts
Filets of Partridge, in Rings
TWO ROASTS
Leg of Lamb, minted — Carp in Court Bouillon
FIFTH COURSE
Lentils à la Queen — Beets sauteed in butter
Artichoke bottoms — Eggs à la Snow
Cream Fritter, with orange water
SALAD
Fresh Celery
DESSERTS
12 different pastries

The above dinner was served in France, while in England a gentleman compains when he was served only:

A Thin Soup
A Partridge, and a Roast Chicken
Dish of celery — A little cauliflower
Two bottles of wine — 2 Biscuits
4 Apples

Such a dinner as the latter, served to the school boys at Eton would have occasioned great rejoicing, but they did not get it. So some of them made love to a cook's wife, or daughter in the village, and became known as lechers. They crept back to school with a hard won or stolen loaf of bread, or bit of cheese or a turkey wing.

It is just as well they did not have much studying to do on empty stomachs.

I give you a favorite dish of that era:

STEAKS OF SWORDFISH, Baked

1½ to 2 lbs. swordfish — ½ cup all-purpose flour
Waxed Paper — Olive Oil (or cooking oil)
Salt & Pepper — Flame proof baking dish
½ tsp. Oregano — Skillet for sauteeing
½ cup Fresh Bread Crumbs — ¼ cups chopped Shallots or Scallions

Cut surrounding skin off the swordfish, cut steaks 1½ inches thick. Wash in cold water, dry on paper towel, and place on waxed paper. Salt and Pepper both sides of steaks, roll in flour, shaking off excess. Pour ⅛ layer of oil into skillet, and set over moderately high heat. When oil is almost smoking, brown fish lightly for 2 or 3 minutes on each side. Transfer to a baking dish. Sprinkle with herbs and shallot. Pour vermouth around fish to about one half way up. Cover with ⅛" layer of bread crumbs. Fish is now ready for oven. Bake in a preheated 375 Deg. oven for 20 to 30 minutes. The steaks are done when a fork pierces them easily. Baste several times with liquid in dish.

Buttery Shredded Beets 6 Pared medium beets ⅛ tsp. pepper
½ tsp. salt — ⅛ tsp. garlic salt — 2 tbsp. butter

On medium grater, grate beets; arrange in skillet. Sprinkle with salt, garlic salt, and pepper; dot with butter. Simmer covered 20 to 30 minutes, or until tender. Pass vinegar or lemon wedges at table. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

One of the desserts of the time would be a fruit pie, probably a deep dish pie:

DEEP DISH PLUM PIE

Make flakey pastry for a 1 crust pie. Roll to ⅛" thickness, to fit 10" x 6" x 2" baking dish. Allow ½" overhang. Fold in half. Cut several slits at center fold.

2½ lbs. plums, halved and pitted (4 cups)
1½ cups granulated sugar — 3 tbsp. flour
⅛ tsp. salt — ¼ tsp. almond extract
2 tbsp. butter

Arrange plums in baking dish. Mix sugar with rest of ingredients. Sprinkle over plums. Unfold pastry over filling. Turn overhang under. Press firmly to side of dish; flute or mark with floured tines of fork. Bake in preheated 425 deg. oven 45 to 60 minutes. Serve warm. Serves 6.

THIS...?

...OR THIS?

Typical view of artichoke fields on Odello ranch. The Odellos are being forced out of the artichoke business by agricultural problems and rising taxes and have given City Reconstruction Company of Los Angeles an option on their land. The option contract is presumably contingent on approval of the zoning changes necessary to accommodate the proposed development.

IT'S UP TO YOU!

City Reconstruction Company cannot proceed with its proposed 1,844 unit development on the Odello Ranch unless it gets approval of the zoning changes necessary to accommodate it. The first official hearing on the application for Special Treatment zoning, before the Lower Valley Advisory Board, took place March 16 at Carmelo School and was well-attended.

The Lower Valley Advisory Board is now preparing to file a report with the Monterey County Planning Commission recommending against the high density requested by the developers, asking for lower density plans, and proposing a delay in any construction by the developer until October 1.

We do not know what action the Monterey County Planning Commission will take after the public hearing presently scheduled for March 31 in Salinas. Neither do we know what action the Board of Supervisors will take at a later date. But we trust that there will be time for us to develop alternative plans for purchasing or leasing the property from the Odellos and putting it into some publicly-owned, permanent, open-space use.

The Coalition and other organizations and persons are in the process of approaching private foundations for funds for this purpose. Attempts should also be made to qualify for federal monies such as those administered by HUD and HEW that are available on a matching basis for the purchase of parks and development of other open-space conservation and recreational uses of land.

The Coalition is currently trying to interest the City of Carmel in a plan to devote part of its "green-belt fund" (from room tax monies) to the lease or purchase of the western half of the Odello Ranch for use as a day-time natural reserve, with hiking trails and simple facilities like those at Pt. Lobos State Reserve.

Another important source of funds to help finance the Odello lease or purchase is you, the people of the area. If the people of the Carmel and Carmel Valley area will show the spirit and interest to dip into their pockets in support of this dream, it could prove of great help in securing funds from outside sources.

It is time to ask yourself how much it would mean to you personally to keep that area adjacent to the beach and bird sanctuary in open-space forever, for the enjoyment of yourselves, your children and future generations.

Meanwhile, the immediate job before us is to continue to write letters expressing our views to the Monterey Planning Commission and the Board of Supervisors and to attend all official public hearings on the developer's application for the high density zoning necessary to fit the proposed 1,844 unit plan.

A Monterey hearing on the Odello plan is presently scheduled before the Monterey Peninsula Area Planning Commission on Thursday, March 25 at 8 p.m. at Monterey City Council Chambers, adjacent to Colton Hall. This commission is primarily an advisory body.

Then, in Salinas on Wednesday, March 31 at 7:30 p.m. comes the Odello plan hearing before the Monterey County Planning Commission. It takes place in the Supervisors' chambers, County Court House, E. Alisal at Church Sts., and we particularly urge you to attend. A hearing on a use permit application for the controversial Val Verde development is also scheduled for later the same evening.

TRANSPORTATION TO SALINAS HEARING

The Carmel Area Coalition has made arrangements for a bus to transport interested persons to and from Salinas for the Monterey County Planning Commission hearing.

The bus will depart from the parking lot of Sunset Cultural Center about 6 p.m. on Wednesday, March 31, and will return there after the hearing, about 11 p.m. Take along a box dinner. If interested, please reserve a seat by telephoning 624-2820 between 1 and 4 p.m., Monday to Friday. Act promptly; first come, first served.
